MCA Remains Committed To Aiding National Shows

Recently, as a result of efforts by the MCA Board of Directors to improve communications between the club's national officers and our regional groups, we have been asked some questions about our support and assistance to club's sponsoring national shows.

It's a legitimate question and one we are happy to answer.

Last year — the Mustang's 25th anniversary year — we had a record number of national events, including five MCA-sanctioned national shows and a dual grand national. Nationals were held in Pensacola, Port Arthur, Amarillo, Los Angeles and Atlanta. The dual grand nationals were held in Tulsa and Winchester. Participation in MCA events was at an all time high.

The first thing the national organization provides — at a cost of more than $3,700 a year — is insurance for each of these events. Our annual insurance policy also provides protection for regional groups staging local shows throughout the year — a benefit that many clubs could not afford on their own.

MCA also spent $1,750 on dash plaques for these seven shows and an additional $1,775 on trophy sponsorships, rule books and judging sheets.

The major expense for MCA in sanctioning national and grand national shows is for travel. The board picks up the tab to send one national officer, MCA's head judge and the editor of The Mustang Times to every national event. Last year the total cost for travel for these MCA representatives came to more than $7,000.

Finally, another major expense for the board is the cost of promoting and covering national events in The Mustang Times. Every regional group sponsoring a national or grand national show receives several months of free advertising in our magazine prior to the show date. At least six full pages of coverage are devoted to national shows and eight or more pages to coverage of grand national events. Together the expense of promoting and covering the seven 1989 events totalled $6,750.

In all, in 1989, MCA spent $21,260.14 in support of national Mustang shows. That figure does not include long distance phone charges, free magazines, postage and administrative costs associated with assisting regional groups with the planning of these events. Nor does it take into account the cost of certifying judges for these events.

The only income MCA receives from these shows is the additional $10 registration fee paid by non-members participating in national shows. That amounted to $1,200 in 1989. Every non-MCA registrant is given the opportunity to apply that additional $10 toward his or her first year's MCA membership dues of $25. We don't have an exact count on how many chose that option, so we can't be certain how much of the $1,200 in non-member registrations actually went into the MCA treasury.

At the very least, however, MCA's total cost for support for national shows in 1989 exceeded $20,000.

Obviously, many MCA members are not aware of these expenses and that, no doubt, led some to question the amount of support provided by the national organization for regional groups hosting MCA-sanctioned shows.

I'm glad some of you asked the question and I appreciate the research done by Kitty Wilmot of our board of directors and our treasurer, Bill Koivu, in coming up with these figures.

We're proud to help regional groups plan, organize and stage MCA national shows, and we are encouraged by the interest affiliated groups across the country are showing in hosting national events.

The deadline for applications for 1991 national and grand national shows is rapidly approaching. All applications for national and grand national shows must be submitted to the board of directors by July 1. The board awards Grand National Shows in July. Any regional group which requests a grand national event but does not receive board approval is offered the opportunity to resubmit its application for a national event. All national shows are approved by the board in August.

If your regional group is considering applying for an MCA national or grand national show for 1991, now's the time to get busy. Our goal at MCA is to share the Mustang hobby with as many different people in as many areas of the country as possible. Maybe we'll get to visit with your regional group in 1991.
