

Ford Racing History

We all know Henry Ford, Sr. was an avid motorsports enthusiast. In fact, he won his very first race on the 10th of October in 1901. It was a ten mile event through the city of Grosse Point, Michigan (where the Ford Mansion still exists today).

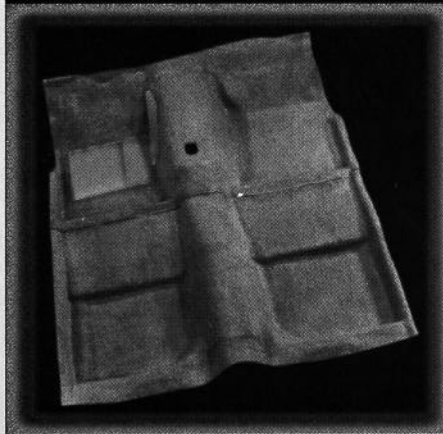

These were the days of ride-along mechanics who would lean way out off running board-like devices to shift their weight around for better balance in the turns. Henry's mechanic and part time moveable ballast was named "Spider Huff".

Henry Ford trailed Alexander Winston until the race was more than half over when the Winston engine blew.

Afterwards, either gloating or being very gracious Henry was heard to say; "Put Winston in my car, and it will beat anything."
