We bought our 1966 Mustang convertible after our second son was born in 1973. We paid $100 for it as it had been totaled by an insurance company.

It has 69,000 original miles with a 289 engine which is spotless. We average approximately 18 to 20 miles per gallon and perhaps more on a trip.

We had always wanted a convertible, so it was like a hobby to us. We fixed it up with a new front end and all the rusted spots were replaced with new. It was sanded and prepped for paint. It was painted the original color, white, which was on it when it was new. As the months went by, we bought little things for it...a new mirror, bumpers, bumperettes, grille and even a new top which took my husband and I a whole day to install. We did all the work by ourselves including the painting. So you can now see why, today, our great little car is worth more to us than a brand new one.

Our next project is a 1967 Mustang convertible which we have just recently purchased. This car also needs quite a bit of work, but it's a hobby so we don't mind.
