Is Dot Net related to Dot Com?

As a member, I receive Mustang Times and even though you mention the Web Site, I have never seen you list the address. As I am a relatively new member it is possible that you have done it in the past. If you do consider this, it should be in a place where everyone can find it. This would be a good thing.

You may also want to consider accepting classified ads through E-mail. It seems that so many more people are going online and it would make it much easier and may increase the number of ads you receive along with club member involvement.

It could also eliminate the possibility of lost mail and comments that were in this month's issue (December 1996) relating to special events not showing up.

Just some food for thought.

I do enjoy the Club and was disappointed that I missed the celebration in Atlanta.

Thank you very much for your input. The Web Site address appears on page one, left-hand column, of each issue.

Your suggestion of accepting classifieds via E-mail is a good one; however, your own letter is an excellent example of the type problems we can encounter. Nowhere in your information do you mention your name or membership number. Without this data we can not determine if you are indeed an MCA member or not. Since Marketplace is open to members only, we must thoroughly check all ads.

This editor is a complete dinosaur and does not in any way, shape, or form trust this new-fangled electronic mail system. Snail mail suits just fine.

However, in an effort to keep MCA and Mustang Times up-to-date, classified advertising will be accepted via E-mail. All of the same rules apply such as a 50-word limit, one ad per member, membership number must be included, telephone number must include area code, ads to be repeated must be resubmitted each month, and a deadline 45 days prior to the cover date (February 15 for the April issue, etc.) will be enforced.

The address for Marketplace submissions, or to contact this publication, is mustangs@america.net. -- Editor

Personal Celebration

In 1994 Ford Motor Company celebrated Mustang's 30th anniversary. Now two years later I'm celebrating my Mustang's 30th with my '66 coupe and '96 Cobra. The '66 now has 100,250 miles on it and has been in my corral for over three years. It is Tahoe Turquoise in color, was repainted in 1981 and still looks great. Mechanically, just about everything has been replaced or rebuilt.

The interior is also all new. Needless to say the 20,000 miles I have driven it have been fun.

The Laser Red Cobra is my real baby. I wanted a Shelby Mustang in the '60s but my finances did not equal my desire. Well, now this "61-year-old boy" has his new toy and what an awesome toy it is (note the "Coiled 2" license plate). My trade-in on the Cobra? A 1995 Mustang GT. Do you note a liking for Mustangs?

I wonder if I can now convince my wife that we really need to put a supercharger on the Cobra. Hmmm.

You have our vote for a supercharger! When it comes to horsepower, the more the merrier.

It's always a pleasure to hear from an enthusiast who knows how to enjoy both the old and new aspects of Mustang. No doubt your stunning '66 garners plenty of admiring looks whenever you take to the road. While at the same time, we're willing to bet that the Cobra brings out the devilish teenager personality of the driver.

Here's to 30 more years of Mustang excitement. -- Editor
