FAQ's

Are these body shells licensed?

Yes, the MS67FB and the MS68FB are licensed through the Ford Restoration Licensing program.

Are these body shells ready to be finished?

No. Whereas they are as close as you can get not being assembled or built on an assembly line, there will still be some fitting and working to make everything line up. Just the same, as if you were working with a 40 year old body shell.

What is the quality of steel used and are the gauges the same as original?

The steel used in our body shell program is 1006 universal automotive grade steel. In most cases the gauge will be thicker than that of the original. The steel possesses fewer additives allowing it to be a bit more flexible and workable than the original.
