pHelt Belt

Next time you change the battery in your car, take a close look at what's UNDER it. Like what you see? Probably not. That's because accelerated corrosion has occurred, due to minute amounts of acid given off during the charging cycle of your car. These acid percolations end up under your battery and eat away the metal. Not a very pretty sight. Until now not much could be done about it. If you change batteries once every 3 or 4 years, you're letting acid damage get the best of your battery box. Think about it. Want a fine lookin' car like yours to have a battery box that wouldn't support a bad habit? If your vehicle means a lot to you, give it a little TLC. A TLC "pHelt belt" can put your mind at ease about battery acid deterioration.

Available from The Tite Line Company, 819 East C Street, Iron Mountain, MI 49801.
